Jeffries still refuses to admit that he has any intentions of attempting to wrest the championship from Jack Johnson, but a belief is growing stronger each day that the retired champion will be seen in the ring again. Although a trifle fat, Jeffries shows all the speed that made him the wonder of the heavyweight division during his active fighting days, and his sparring partner, Sam Berger, is authority for the statement that the big fighter's blows have not lost their steam.

His career was short, sweet and full of excitement. He flashed out as a champlon when the betting was 30 to 1 against him. He whipped the best in his class in a short time, and then the Broadway life got him. His greatest delight was to walk up and down the great white way, buy wine for himself and friends, stake every one who was broke, and never expect a return. He wound up his ring life in poverty and today depends upon his drawing abiity as a three-round exhibition boxer for a living.
